"The aim for any editorial in a B2B publication is to engage the reader. The best way to do this is to provide concise, up-to-date information about a specific project or innovation your company is currently working on, including recent developments and its practical application. Attention-grabbing articles are not usually laden with 'pr-speak', but rather lets your technical and industry knowledge speak for itself. As opposed to display advertisements, the goal is to give a teaser about your company without going into long detail of corporate history, etc, but rather to tell them something they didn't know already. That could be how your product or service is changing how your customers do business, and what they can achieve with them. If you would like to discuss your editorial goals in more detail, I would be glad to hear from you."
